| 5  | Students need access to educational opportunities that help them learn, explore their interests, and see possibilities for their future. This includes hands-on learning, STEM, arts and music, technology, career exploration, mentoring, and other enrichment experiences. We also know that needs outside of school, such as food, housing, transportation, mental health services, and access to technology, can affect a student's ability to learn and participate                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                            | 8/9/2026 10:57 AM  |
| 6  | Individuals seeking MECISC assistance often need access to affordable capital, grants, microloans, business planning, financial management, marketing, digital tools, legal and regulatory guidance, and one-on-one technical assistance. They may also need referrals to workforce development, childcare, transportation, healthcare, housing, food assistance, language-accessible services, disaster recovery resources, and other supports that reduce barriers to starting, sustaining, or growing a business.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                | 8/7/2026 10:12 AM  |
| 7  | Individuals seeking assistance often need a combination of housing, financial, and supportive services. Common needs include affordable and stable housing, rental and utility assistance, eviction prevention, emergency shelter, and help navigating housing resources and benefits. Many also need employment and workforce development, financial counseling, credit and debt assistance, transportation, childcare, healthcare, mental health services, legal assistance, and other services that help them remain stably housed and build long-term economic security. We also perceive a need for better coordination among service providers so individuals do not have to navigate multiple disconnected systems on their own. While these direct services are not the primary focus of ISCHC's work, they inform our regional strategies and partnerships. Our role is to help strengthen the housing system and connect organizations, policymakers, and community partners to address the conditions that contribute to housing instability and create pathways for individuals and families to thrive. | 8/7/2026 10:00 AM  |

| 2  | We struggle most with meeting the high demand for legal aid services in our region. We have a high need but not enough attorneys to meet the needs. We also struggle to provide legal aid services to a high low income population who do not meet our LSC requirements but are still very low income and need assistance. Unrestricted funding helps us to serve those clients and have the resources needed for education and more community lawyering services.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        | 8/11/2026 1:44 PM  |

| 4  | We struggle to provide fully for meaningful work and wealth, it's a process and sometimes we have to know the right people to get there. Also, safe relationships are hard to foster because some of the individuals we work with can struggle with anti-social behaviors; while they have safe networks within our agency, it can be a challenge for individuals to build out safe networks for themselves, especially in Western culture of independence/individualization. We still see a lot of loneliness.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                           | 8/10/2026 10:00 AM |
| 5  | REEF's resources are focused on educational enrichment, so we are not able to directly provide services such as food assistance, housing, transportation, mental health services, or other basic needs. We also aren't always able to fund every request we receive from teachers. Being part of this coalition can help us better understand what resources are available and where we can work together to support students and families                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                | 8/9/2026 10:57 AM  |
| 6  | MECISC may struggle to provide direct financial assistance at the scale needed—including flexible start-up and growth capital, grants, affordable credit, and emergency or disaster-recovery funds. We also have limited capacity to directly provide non-business stabilization supports such as housing, childcare, transportation, healthcare, food assistance, and intensive legal or mental-health services; these needs typically require strong referral partnerships and additional funding.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                      | 8/7/2026 10:12 AM  |
| 7  | ISCHC struggles to provide direct, individual-level services such as rental and utility assistance, emergency shelter, eviction prevention, legal assistance, healthcare, mental health services, childcare, transportation, and employment support. These services are outside our primary role as a regional housing collective, but we recognize that they are critical to housing stability. At the regional level, we also have limited capacity, based on the opportunity/need to coordinate and advance comprehensive housing solutions across the entire Inland SoCal region. This includes aligning policy strategies, financial tools and resources, housing solutions, and cross-sector partnerships across jurisdictions and communities. Greater capacity would allow ISCHC to strengthen regional coordination, identify and address system gaps, and help scale effective housing strategies across Riverside and San Bernardino Counties. | 8/7/2026 10:00 AM  |
